The Satsun won the race for boats thirty-eight feet and under. They went twenty miles and the Respite finished well in the lead, but not far enough to offset the allowance to the Satsun, which freda, the new boat owned by John M Rutherfurd, did much better than she did at Port Washington in the Motor Boat Carnival. She made the 20 miles in 41 minutes 52 seconds, and although she had to allow lots of time to the others she won the race very easily, with the Lurline second, beaten 14 minutes 18 seconds. There were several starters in a bang and go back race, but some of the owners mistook the signals. They were started at 4:05 o'clock and ran up the river until a bomb was fired, when they turned and ran down the river. Several thought they were to finish then, but the instructions said they were to keep down the river until a second bomb was fired and were then to turn again and proceed to the fin-ishing line. The Firetly, owned by C. D.

Fisher, was first and the White Swallow, owned by V. V. Harley, was second.

Jockey C. Borel, who rode the Futurity winner of 1913, will be free to carry out his contract to ride for James Butler in future, as his license was restored at a meeting of the stewards of the Jockey Club held-eyesterday. Borel was set down early in the season by the Kentucky Racing Commission, and though he has been reinstated by that body since, the stewards here delayed action on his case until the races in this vicinity were over. A license also was granted to Jockey Taplin, but the applications of John Wilson. Howell and Frank Adams were denied.
